

INTRODUCING CHRISTIAN ETHICS INTERVIEW QUESTIONS

- What led you to write Introducing Christian Ethics?
- How do you think it can be helpful for everyday Christians, not just professors and students?
- Should churches talk more about ethics?
- What do you mean by the question, can you name a moral conviction that, if you relinquished it, would redefine your identity?
- What do you mean with your focus on Jesus and the disinherited, and a rethinking of the kingdom of God as the basis for a Christian ethics?
- We live in a time when people have retreated into their ideological camps and echo chambers. How can reading up on all the issues mentioned in Introducing Christian Ethics help? Can you offer an example?
- Which of the social issues that you treat in Introducing Christian Ethics are you most passionate about today, and what do you say about them?
- Obviously it's not easy to follow Jesus, but why specifically do you say it's so hard?
- How does Introducing Christian Ethics most clearly move beyond, breaks with, or cover new territory from Kingdom Ethics?
- Can you say more about your academic appointment in the Netherlands? What draws you to that international setting?
- What's unique about Introducing Christian Ethics as opposed to other books on this topic?
- You talk about truthfulness in one of your chapters in Introducing Christian Ethics. Why is that so important today?
- Why would a book that's an overview of Christian ethics and the social issue of our day take on the big topic of White Christian supremacy?
- What are you working on for your next book, and how does it fit with what you've been doing?
